

Erin Jung, Adjunct Counsel

Erin Jung brings over a decade of experience in the prospect research and management field to her clients. She began as a prospect researcher in the Alumni & Development office of Washington University in St. Louis and then moved to Barnes-Jewish Hospital Foundation. She headed up their prospect research and management office for the Foundation as well as the Alvin J. Siteman Cancer Center Capital Campaign, a $125 million joint campaign between BJHF and Washington University School of Medicine. Erin then joined the Saint Louis Art Museum as prospect research manager and developed the prospect management system for their $125+ million capital campaign.

Erin has also consulted for numerous organizations since 2001 and is a member of Association of Fundraising Professionals, Association of Professional Researchers for Advancement, APRA Missouri-Kansas Chapter and New England Development Research Association.

She currently serves as board member for APRA MO-KAN. She earned her bachelor's degree in history at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

